

Mokena Telegraph Operator Stunned By Lightning Bolt

During a heavy thunderstorm last Thursday night, lightning traveled along the telegraph wires into the Rock Island depot at Mokena and knocked Whitney Carter, night telegraph operator unconscious. Mr. Carter was seated at the telegraph desk sending a message when the bolt struck. The shock threw him to the floor. He was unconscious for 20 minutes.

All the street and house lights were out of commission. When Frank Huser, the third trick operator got off the mid-night train he found the depot in darkness and feared a hold up had taken place. When he flashed a flashlight on the telegraph office floor, he was greatly surprised to find Mr. Carter lying unconscious on the floor. A typewriter had also been knocked down on the floor but was not damaged. Dr. E. G. MacMahon of Mokena was called. Mr. Carter was revived and later taken to his home in Beverly Hills. He was laid up for a few days recovering from the shock.

The bolt burned two big holes in two sheets of paper lying on the telegraph desk.

Hundreds Pay Tribute to Former Mokena Pastor

The St. John Evangelical church at Mokena was crowded to capacity last Friday afternoon when hundreds of mourners came to pay final tribute to Rev. Wm. Kreis, former pastor of this church and late of Dolton, Illinois, who met a tragic death in an automobile accident at Odell, Illinois last Monday.

The service held at Mokena was memorial in nature, Rev. Theodore Lapp, officiated. The main funeral service was held at Dolton before the funeral party came to Mokena.

Miss Elsie Kreis of St. Louis, a niece, sang a number of selections at the Mokena services. The floral offerings were profuse and beautiful. There were special pieces from the St. John congregation of Mokena, a former charge of the deceased pastor. Burial was made in the St. John cemetery south of Mokena.

Rev. William Kreis was born August 4, 1874 at Steubenville, Germany, the second child of Jacob Kreis and Susanne, nee Kremser. After a period of thorough religious training, he was confirmed by his pastor, the Rev. F. Schultz in 1888. He came to America as a visitor to the World's Fair held in Chicago in 1893. Four years later he entered Eden Theological Seminary in St. Louis, Mo., graduating from that institution on June 25, 1900 and was ordained to the Christian ministry on July 8, 1900 in St. Stephen's church in St. Louis by Rev. E. Struckmeyer, pastor of St. Stephens.

On October 28, 1900, Rev. Mr. Kreis was united in marriage with Marie Freytag. This union was blessed with two children, Arthur and Elfrieda now surviving.

His first field of labor was in Mt. Vernon, Iowa, where he served fully for seven years. Then followed one year of labor in home mission work in Crystal Lake, Ill. Accepting a call from the Evangelical church in Donaldson, Iowa, he served there ten years. In 1917 he was called to the pastorate of the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena where the best years of his ministry were spent. It was during his stay in Mokena that the new St. John Evangelical church was erected. Since 1925 he was pastor of the Immanuel Evangelical church in Dolton, Ill. The quiet, unassuming nature of Rev. Mr. Kreis, coupled with a sincere and conscientious application to duty and a friendly and sympathetic attitude toward all with whom he came in contact, endeared him to the hearts of many in the communities where he labored.

A brief service for the immediate family was held in the home at 11 o'clock on Friday July 1, in Dolton, the Rev. B. Freese of Blue Island, officiating after which the body was taken to the church in Dolton where it lay in state until the opening of the service at 1 o'clock with Rev. Mr. Freese in charge. Rev. E. Dreusicke of Hinsdale, Illinois, long an intimate friend of the deceased, spoke in German. The English sermon was delivered by Rev. H. J. Shick of Chicago, a classmate of Rev. Mr. Kreis. A mixed quartette, composed of Rev. and Mrs. E. Helm and Rev. and Mrs. B. Freese, sang several appropriate numbers and the choir of Immanuel church sang a number as a requiem to the pastor who had so faithfully labored with the group. Rev. Erwin Thompson, pastor of the Methodist church in Dolton, friend and neighbor of the Kreis family, the scripture selection. In a few well chosen words the Rev. A. J. Mayer, secretary of the North Illinois District of the Evangelical Synod of North America of which District the Rev. Kreis was a member, brought the bereaved family the condolences of the District. Rev. A. W. Fruschte, a former neighbor of the deceased in Iowa, now pastor of Bethlehem church, Chicago, spoke briefly on behalf of the members of the Evangelical church in Donaldson, Iowa, where Rev. Mr. Kreis was pastor for ten years.

Rev. Mr. Kreis is survived by his widow, Marie Kreis, one son Arthur of Joliet, one daughter, Mrs. Elfrieda Krapp of Mokena, one foster daughter, Mrs. Herta Packard of Dolton, Ill., four grandchildren, two brothers and two sisters.

He attained the age of 57 years, 10 months and 23 days.

Frankfort School District Divided

Last week a very interesting school matter was decided by County Supt. of Schools August Maue in Frankfort township.

With the opening of the subdivision east of Frankfort the country school house in District 156 became quite crowded. A number of the residents in the subdivision got up a petition, but the plan was not considered feasible by the county superintendent as well as by many of the property owners. Following a hearing held in the district school last winter, the matter was dropped.

This spring the matter came up again and last week the district was divided by the county superintendent. The new district is now known as school district 156 and is located as follows: Starts from the Henry Geuther farm east to the county line. The Lincoln highway is the boundary line on the north and the Michigan Central railroad is the boundary line on the south. The new district's assessed valuation including the Michigan Central railroad property is about $95,000.

With the division of the district, the old board of directors has been dismissed and a special election has been called for July 16th in the old part of the original district now designated as district 156A and the following three candidates for school directors will be voted on: Carl Barlow, Philip J. Stellwagen and Edward Stapleton. Three directors are to be elected.

In this district farms are chiefly located, also 25 subdivision homes.

In the new district the bulk of the subdivision homes are located. The new district will also elect a new board of school directors but the candidates have not been announced.

It is understood that the new district will vote for a new school building in the near future.

Tinley Band Concert July 4th Makes Hit

The Tinley Park Community Band scored a big success with their 4th of July concert and dance.

The free concert in the Linden Garden made a big hit and drew a big crowd. The band numbering 50 members, played exceptionally well and shows efficient leadership on the part of Eddie Hirsch, the present director and organizer of the band.

The band certainly can play and Tinley can well be proud of it. This shows that things can be done when there are live people in a community. People came from neighboring towns and cities to see and hear the Tinley band. Another outstanding feature was the Blue Island drum and Bugle Corps under the direction of Mr. Weisner. They paraded on the streets adjoining Linden Garden and later played in the garden.

At the close of the band concert a dance was held in the Saenger hall which was very largely attended.

Marley Fiftieth 4th of July Celebration Draws Record Crowd

The 50th consecutive 4th of July celebration staged by the Marley Brotherhood at the Storm's Grove, drew a record crowd. C. F. Haley served as chairman of the day for the 48th consecutive time.

A very humorous and colorful parade was the chief object of interest and it certainly was well gotten up. A very realistic presentation of the pioneer days was a covered wagon drawn by a yoke of oxen driven by C. F. Colcord of Alpine owner of the oxen. The wooden neckyoke used was a decidedly interesting relic being made in Parsonsfield, Maine 125 years ago by Mr. Colcord's grandfather.

Accompanying the covered wagon were soldiers, Indian guides and frontiers men attired in the garb of the early days. Indian squaws with their paposes on their backs also accompanied the wagon. A pony to which the Indian type of buggy was attached was also quite a novelty.

Two floats that were a knock out were those depicting the Marley "police department", one auto representing the chief's car, the other the patrol. They were both very humorous with quaint legends painted on the sides of the cars. A cow bell was hung in front of the car of the "chief" and drew much attention.

A real old time "hack" as used about 50 years ago with high box seat, driver and all was a rather historical feature. An old time bridal couple occupied the hack and were attired in clothes of a period of the civil war days. This old time feature was highly interesting.

The political and wet and dry issues were also represented by a float showing two "wets" with bottle and jug of "hard liquor". One of the political streamers read "Send Roosevelt's mail to the White House after March 1st".

The George Washington Bi-Centennial feature was not overlooked as there was a float bearing Uncle Sam, Miss Columbia and a number of colonialists dressed in the style of Washington's day.

A feature that provoked much fun was a man smoking a pipe and pushing a baby buggy labeled "Believe it or not" followed by a big fat Negro mammy and pickinies.

A rather odd float was one decorated entirely with colored funny papers.

Oh yes, we must not forget the Marley "city council" also had a special car. And then there was the Marley "band" wearing red paper hats and using old phonograph horns, accordians and mouth organs for band instruments. Edward Marshall headed the parade on horseback.

The parade formed in front of the Marley church and marched thru the streets of the village and after parading around the Storm's Grove a few times, disbanded.

A program followed the parade with Rev. Mr. Jay of Lockport as the principal speaker. Lunch was served on the grounds. In the afternoon an athletic program was given. A feature was a polo game with the players mounted on model T Fords.

Marley the small in size, is large when it comes to putting things over and they are full of the spirit of co-operation and patriotism and set an example that their larger neighbors can well copy from. Well done Marley and all credit due you for your splendid celebration.

New Lunch Room

Opens In New Lenox

J. H. Burns of Midland Club of Chicago who has been in the restaurant business a number of years, has opened a lunch room in New Lenox.

Fred Rauch, Mokena Conoco oil dealer, while driving his oil truck on Keane avenue Thursday noon, was held up and robbed by two bandits. Mr. Rauch was headed toward Mokena. When about two miles north of the Klose farm he suddenly saw the radiator of a Ford close to his truck and when he looked up a bandit was standing on the running board of his truck and covering him with a revolver. The bandit ordered Mr. Rauch to stop the truck and get out of the cab and into the bandits car which was a Tudor Model A Ford sedan. It is thought the bandit jumped from the Ford onto the oil truck while both cars were running about 30 miles an hour.

One of the bandits was tall and slim, wore blue trousers and a white shirt and no hat. The bandit who held up Mr. Rauch was heavy set, wore a brown suit and hat.

After Mr. Rauch got out of the truck cab he was ordered to lie down on the floor of the sedan. One of the bandits stood guard over him. The bandit car was driven off the pavement onto a gravel road and stopped. The robbers took $27 in cash from Mr. Rauch and acted as if he should have more money. He convinced them that was all the money he had. They took all but 15 cents. Mr. Rauch was then ordered to lay down in a ditch alongside the road while the bandit car sped away to the north. After the car was gone Mr. Rauch crawled out of the ditch and went to the farm of John Boromet who took him in his car back to his truck on Route 51. Mr. Rauch drove to Mokena and reported the holdup which occurred at 12:30 o'clock. The county highway police were notified but no trace was found of the holdup men.

LEAGUE'S NEW PALACE
READY IN TWO YEARSStructural Work at Geneva Is Now Complete.

Geneva.—The League of Nations' new $5,000,000 palace will be completed early in 1934.

The structural work on the secretariat building is completed. Construction on the council hall already has started. The foundations of the assembly hall and the Rockefeller library are being dug.

The project for a permanent league building was advanced in 1926. After many disputes over the site, the foundation stone was laid in September of 1929. Active construction work on the secretariat building did not begin until March of 1931.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., gave added impetus to the project when he contributed $2,000,000 for the construction of a library. Since the establishment of the league, Americans have donated more than $8,000,000 toward its work.

The present site of the new palace is still a subject of many bitter disputes. The building committee originally wanted to construct the palace on the lake, just a short distance from the present secretariat. An original plot of sloping land was obtained from the city, but it was found insufficient.

The committee started negotiations with an aged and wealthy Englishwoman, Mrs. Alexis Barton, who owned the adjoining property. Mrs. Barton, who is known as the empress of Geneva for her autocratic leadership of society here, refused to sell.

The original site was one of the most beautiful in the vicinity of Geneva. The palace would have been situated on a small hill on a point overlooking the lake in two directions. It would have been closer to town and the international labor office. But another and less attractive site was chosen.

The offices of the secretariat provide space for between 500 and 600 offices. The secretariat will be balanced on the right end by the council hall. This hall forms a break in the construction, the assembly hall being set back some distance into a terraced patio, which connects with the council hall and the secretariat. The entrance to the assembly hall will be separate.

Across the patio, the Rockefeller library will balance the council hall. All the buildings are connected by covered wings, which will contain committee rooms. In front of the palace is a sloping park, which will be terraced to hide the railroad tracks.

THE URGE OF POVERTY

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

The story is told that an admirer of Cervantes, knowing of the poverty against which the talented Spaniard struggled, suggested to the archbishop of Toledo that he be made a pensioner of the state and taken out of the squalor in which he was working.

"God forbid!" a friend standing by exclaimed: "It is because he is so poor that he writes so well; it is his poverty that drives him to his desk."

We thought Porter one of the finest men in college, and one whose prospects of success were the brightest. He had a good physique, and a keen mind, and he was thoroughly interested in the profession which he proposed following. His family were poor but respectable; they could only with sacrifice help him through college and then it was necessary that he help himself in small ways.

After he had taken his bachelor's degree he went East and entered one of the oldest and best professional schools in the country where he won honors for himself. He came back to

ODD THINGS AND NEW—By Lane Bode

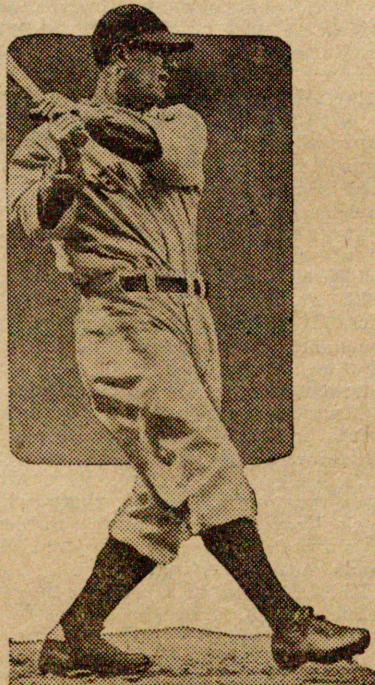

(WNU Service)

The Middle West and took up the practice of law, and bade fair to be one of the outstanding lawyers of the great city in which he located.

Then he married a rich woman. She was selfish; she wanted him for herself; it irritated her to have him work so hard; she could see no use of it. She had far more money than sufficed for the two of them. Why should he struggle and toil and stay in his office all day? Gradually he gave up his business. He looks after her cats and her canaries when at home, and takes her to the Riviera in the winter. He has grown fat and lazy and useless. He has forgotten that he ever had an ambition to be somebody, to do something, to get somewhere. Had he had the urge of poverty he might have been one of the outstanding men of his time, and now he's little more than a cipher.

Add a little melted butter to uncooked frosting. It improves the flavor and also prevents cracking.

THE CALL OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 2:11-4:20.
GOLDEN TEXT—And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Bush on Fire.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Moses Given a Great Task.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Hearing and Heeding God's Call.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Accepting a Great Task.

I. Moses Trained in Midian (2:11-13).

The occasion of his being in the desert was the effort of Pharaoh to slay him when he heard of Moses' act in slaying the Egyptian who was smiting a Hebrew. Having fled from the face of Pharaoh, he took up his abode in the land of the Midianites. He himself needed further discipline for his great work. This he experienced through forty years in the desert.

II. His Marriage to Zipporah (2:16-22).

Soon after his arrival in the Land of Midian he defended the daughters of Reuel, the priest of Midian, against the shepherds, and watered their flock. Out of gratitude for this act Moses was called into the priest's house to eat bread. While dwelling in this house Zipporah, a daughter of the priest, became his wife.

III. The Lord Speaks to Moses at the Burning Bush (3:1-6).

While keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert the Lord appeared to Moses in a vision in a burning bush. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the lesson of proper approach to God, who revealed himself as the God of his fathers, the covenant God.

IV. Moses Commissioned as the Deliverer of His People (3:7-10).

1. God's active interest in his people (v. 7).

a. "I have seen the affliction of my people." So keenly conscious is God of all that goes on in the world that not one of his chosen ones can be touched without his notice.

b. "I have heard their cries." No cry ever goes up to God from his child unheard.

c. "I know their sorrows." Many indeed are the sorrows of God's children, but he knows all about them and will adapt himself in grace to their need.

2. God's gracious obligation to his people (vv. 8, 9).

a. To deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians.

b. "To bring them up out of the land."

c. "To bring them into a good land and large, into a land flowing with milk and honey."

3. God's commission to Moses (v. 10). This call seems to have been a great surprise to Moses.

V. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (3:11-4:16).

1. His personal unworthiness (v. 11). He said, "Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh?" He realized his insufficiency for his task. Moses did not refuse to go, but laid his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that he would be with him.

2. The difficulty of the people to understand Moses' relationship to God (vv. 13, 14). Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer forty years before. Since God changes his name as he assumes a new relationship to his people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be and his corresponding name. This new name is "I AM." This name is from the Hebrew verb "to be." It indicates:

a. God's self-existence. It sets forth the idea that God is the self-existent one and the source of all existence.

b. His self-sufficiency. He said, "I AM THAT I AM." God is the unique one. He is not dependent upon any other existence.

c. His unchangeableness. "I AM THAT I AM" may be expanded to mean "I am what I always was. What I always was and am, I always will be."

3. Unbelief on the part of the people (4:1-5). This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders.

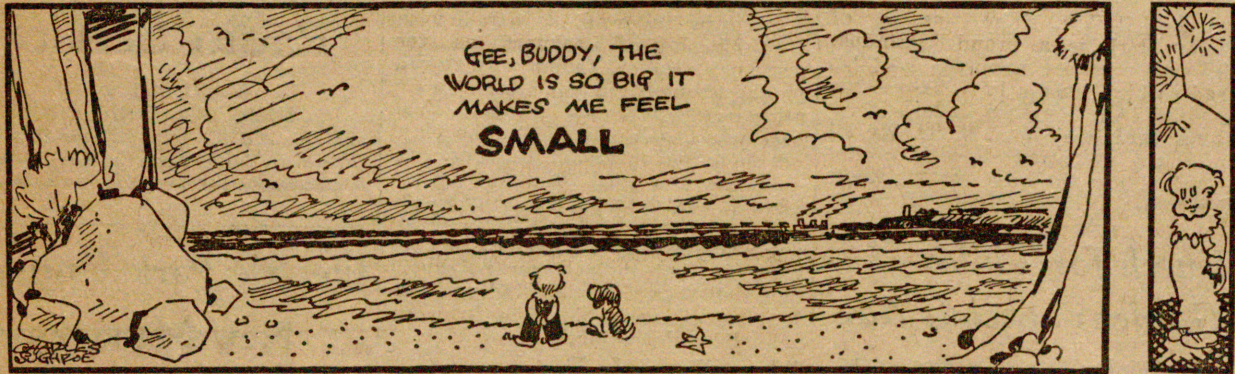

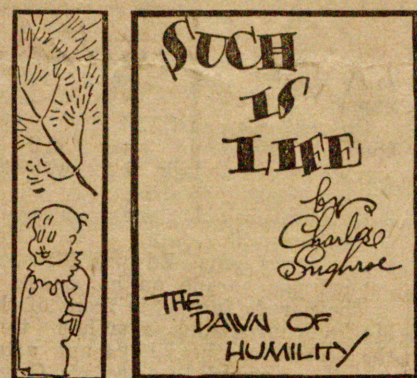

4. Lack of eloquence (4:10). Moses confessed that he was slow of speech and of a slow tongue. His ability to speak had not been improved since the Lord had spoken to him. This difficulty the Lord in his infinite patience met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron.

Laughter

Laughter should dimple the cheek, not furrow the brow. A jest should be such that all shall be able to join in the laugh which it occasions; but if it bears hard upon one of the company, like the crack of a string, it makes a stop in the music.—Fellham.

Consider This

In all differences consider that both you and your opponent or enemy are mortal, and that ere long your very memories will be extinguished.—Aurel.

Contrasts From Paris

You can count on a variety of sleeves in any group of Paris dresses this season. They may be long or short, puffed or cut like a cape. And you will always find high-molded waists with skirts that fall in narrow lines below. Paton (left) does things with color contrast when he adds a purple antelope belt, a purple felt hat and purple scarf ends to a light green crepe de chine frock. Lelong (right) also likes the contrast of a plain fabric with a print.—Woman's Home Companion.

NEW INVENTION HELP TO PLANE TRANSPORTAutomatically Steers Planes
in Bad Weather.

New York.—The development of another great aid to air transport, automatic steering with wind drift correction by radio, has been accomplished. The perfection of this new aid to bad weather flying comes at a time when pilots on all air lines are studying instrument flying to qualify under a new ruling of the Department of Commerce.

Air transport has long been regarded as a seasonal means of travel, interrupted by fog, severe storms and other weather disturbances. In winter, flying has been almost completely stopped in certain parts of the country for periods as long as a week. Even in spring and summer, occasional fogs have hindered air transport and sudden weather changes have constituted a constant menace guarded against by an elaborate weather reporting system covering all the airways.

Due to these conditions, the development of instruments sufficiently accurate to enable pilots to fly safely through all kinds of weather has been under way in engineering laboratories throughout the country. Many improvements have been effected and now pilots of the air lines are required to become proficient at flying by the new instruments before the first of next year and the elimination of weather as an obstacle to continuous air line operation is approached.

The value of the new device which provides automatic steering with wind drift correction by radio is such that it almost obviates the necessity of instrument flying by the pilots. With such a device the pilot would merely

STATE CAPITOL

Illinois Press Association

The state has just recently retired $1,050,000 of anticipation notes, according to a report issued from the office of State Auditor Oscar Nelson. Of the total, $1,000,000 has been issued against general revenue and the other $50,000 was against the University of Illinois fund. Retirement leaves outstanding obligations of $23,700,000 divided as follows: $10,800,000 borrowed against other funds in the state treasury; $400,000 in revenue notes for the University of Illinois fund purchased by the First National bank of Chicago, and $12,500,000 of notes sold for emergency unemployment relief.

The period from June 18 to September 25 has been designated as the outdoor small arms target practice season for the Illinois National Guard, Adj. Gen. Carlos E. Black has announced. Shooting this summer will be limited because of the lack of money, with the target practice done by the men who need it most, usually the first year men who have had no previous shooting. Schedules for shooting will be worked out by units in each locality. Automatic rifles, machine rifles, pistols and machine guns will be used.

Illinois escaped the grasshopper outbreak last year, but these pests this year threaten to cause damage in scattered localities of the state, according to W. P. Flint, chief entomologist of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois and of the Illinois State Natural History survey. Moderate to heavy infestations of grasshoppers can be expected throughout the central and north central parts of Illinois as a result of a much larger number of eggs laid during the very mild late fall, Flint explained.

Constitutionality of the recent law governing the length of trucks and trailers operated on Illinois highways was upheld in an opinion filed at Danville by three federal judges. The law provides that after January 1, 1933, no truck more than 40 feet in length may operate on Illinois highways. More than 60 cartage firms attacked the amendment to the motor vehicle law. Most of them are engaged in interstate transportation of freight.

The Illinois waterway is giving employment to approximately 10,000 men and is putting between $10,000,000 and $11,000,000 into circulation for labor and materials, according to statements issued by federal and state officials. The work will close around March 1, 1933. While much of the construction fund is being spent within the borders of Illinois, it is aiding business in industrial centers far removed from the actual scene of operations, according to Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, district engineer for the War department.

State banks in Illinois are without authority under the law to act as agents for insurance companies. This opinion was given to State Auditor Nelson by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom on receipt of information that one of the state departments had issued a circular to the effect that, under new legislation, licenses might be issued State banks to do business as insurance agents or brokers.

Gamma chapter of Epsilon Sigma Omicron Honor society has been organized by the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. The purpose of the society is to further the education of its members by means of reading courses. The reading courses eligible for certification are those published by the American Library association, the Illinois library extension division, and the United States bureau of education. The library extension division enrolls the women in the society, loans the books listed in the outlines, when obtainable through members' local library, and issues certificates for each course satisfactorily completed, upon the submission of written reviews of the books included in the course.

Almost twice as many cases of malaria have been reported in Illinois this year as during the corresponding period of 1931, the state department of public health has announced. At the end of May, case reports this year stood at 45 against 20 for that period of last year. Furthermore, the statement continued, during 1931 the 561 cases reported gave by far the highest recorded annual incidence of that disease in Illinois for more than a decade.

The Illinois state fair premium list for 1932 is now ready for distribution, Milton E. Jones, general manager of the exposition, has announced. Copies of the book will go forward promptly to all exhibitors of record, to farm bureau headquarters, officials of county agricultural fairs, and to other interested citizens upon request.

Planning of a program to bring about the ultimate consolidation of governments of the state, and especially of Cook county, so as to effect economy of operation and consequent reduction of taxes, was accomplished recently at a meeting of a subcommittee of the Illinois commission on taxation and expenditure. The purpose of the meeting was to lay out a program with the subject of later gathering information and expert views on the subject so that the findings can be presented at the next session of the legislature.

Although the corn borer probably will advance closed to Illinois during the coming season, it looms as less of a threat to the state's principal crop when it is viewed in the light of "preparedness" experiments being conducted by the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois and the Illinois State Natural History survey. The experiments have brought to light some strains of Illinois corn which yield fairly high even when infested with as many as ten corn borers to each stalk.

Industries at the Stateville and Joliet penitentiaries have been temporarily closed down because of lack of markets for prison products coupled with a shortage of funds. The work of the prisons has been falling off for some time, with the sale of prison products limited to the state and its political subdivisions by the state-use system which went into effect last July 1. Warden Henry C. Hill has made plans for increasing the recreation of the convicts to counterbalance the lack of work.

Seven Chicago law firms have received permission from the Illinois Supreme court to file suggestions in connection with the petition for a rehearing of a case involving the liability of stockholders in State banks on which the court ruled in April. The opinion held that, if stock transfers were made during a period when the bank was open, each successive stockholder can be held liable up to the par value of his shares for debts accruing against the bank during the period he held the stock.

Friends of the court were granted permission to take a part in the arguments before the Supreme court on the constitutionality of the State income tax. Permission to enter the income tax case was granted the Illinois Agricultural association, which fought for the income tax as a means of farm relief.

Last minute applications brought the total sale of Illinois 6 per cent revenue notes to $5,068,200, it has been announced by Phillip R. Clarke, chairman of the committee. A bid for that amount has been mailed to the state treasurer by the Chicago banks. Relief notes totaling $6,250,000 have been authorized by the legislature. The amount subscribed thus far will enable relief stations in the city of Chicago to continue in operation through June and until about the middle of July.

County boards of supervisors cannot cut the salaries of county officials now in office, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has advised in a ruling for the state's attorney of DeWitt county. The attorney general said that only officers to be elected in the future could be affected and then, the salary of the state's attorney, one of the officers mentioned, could not be changed by the board as his compensation is set by an act of the legislature.

A reception in honor of all Republican candidates of the state was held recently at the Morrison hotel in Chicago. Mrs. John Wesley Gray, of Chicago, state chairman of the Women's division of the Illinois Republican State Central committee, was in charge of the function. The title of state chairman of the Illinois Women's Republican organization was conferred upon Mrs. Gray at the Illinois convention when it was held in Springfield.

John Boyle, director of state parks, is preparing for one of the largest crowds in history at Starved Rock state park on the Illinois river near Ottawa July 3 and 4. There will be a reunion of Starved Rock fans, who are expected to flock into the park from all sections of northern Illinois, western Indiana and eastern Iowa. In preparation for the crowd the free parking space has been enlarged and a rustic stairway has been built from the hotel level to the tourist camp 150 feet up, as a means of keeping pedestrians off the concrete park drive. Last July 4 more than 5,000 automobiles were driven into Starved Rock park.

Employment in Illinois coal mines, at low ebb during April because working contracts ended March 31, showed some improvement during May, according to the monthly production report, issued by John G. Millhouse, director of the state department of mines and minerals. There was a 23.5 per cent increase in the number of mines working; 40.3 per cent more men were on the pay-rolls and the output for May was 45.3 per cent more than that of the preceding month, according to the records.

The two free-for-all events on the Grand Circuit harness racing program scheduled for the Illinois State fair, August 20 to 27, have attracted fields of starters that assure fast time, close finishes, and thrilling demonstrations of race track generalship.

Illinois was adding to its state and county highway systems at the rate of 38.3 miles per week, June 8, according to the tabulation of road construction work for the week that ended on that day.

The worst storm of the season struck Quincy when 2.37 inches of rain fell in less than three hours. At the Illinois flying field the big hangar was damaged to such an extent it will have to be entirely rebuilt. Macomb, Carthage, Keokuk and Burlington also suffered damage to buildings and trees.

No. 7.
Shifting Values

AN ELEMENT which often upsets your most careful calculations of the trick-taking value of your hand, is a bid from one of your opponents. If you wish to become an absolutely reliable bidder you must develop facility in shifting the value of your hand in relation to the location of adverse bids. This facility is indispensable in making sound over-calls, assists, rebids and doubles, both take-out and penalty.

Speaking generally, if you are over the bidder (that is, if he must play before you do) your position is advantageous, while if you are under the bidder (if he plays after you) you are at a disadvantage.

When you are over an opponent who has made a no trump bid, all of your tenaces and guarded honors take on an added value. Under the opponent, who has made such a declaration the same type of holdings greatly depreciates in value.

The fact of sitting over or under a trump declaration does not cause such a general shift in your values, but a revaluation of guarded honors and tenaces in the opponent's suit is required. Also, a certain appreciation or depreciation in your original estimate of your hand should take place. Honors, other than aces and solid sequences, held in the suit which your opponent has bid, are always worth more than their original value when over the bidder and correspondingly less when the bidder is over you. For example:

K x x of opponent's suit OVER the bidder—1 trick; UNDER the bidder—0 trick.

A Q of opponent's suit OVER the bidder—2 tricks; UNDER the bidder—1 trick.

K J X of opponent's suit OVER the bidder—2 tricks; UNDER the bidder—0 tricks.

K Q X of opponent's suit OVER the bidder—2 tricks; UNDER the bidder—1 trick.

Holdings of the same type are valued in much the same way when over or under no trump bids.

Rebidding a Suit Bid of One

When the issue is one of rebidding an initial declaration which your partner has raised, there are two important considerations; first, how good an assisting hand has your partner shown by his raise, and second, what strength have you in addition to that declared originally? According to the strength of your partner's raise, coupled with the additional strength of your own cards, you may rebid.

If your initial bid has been made on the minimum requirement of four playing-tricks, do not be tempted into a rebid even though partner gives you an enticing double raise. "Bid your cards for all they are worth," yes, but don't bid the same values twice.

When, however, you find you have rebid value, you may follow this rule: Rebid once for every playing-trick over the minimum of four indicated by your original declaration.

In such rebids, your full strength should be shown immediately, stopping, of course, at a game contract unless you are justified by your honors in giving a slam indication.

While a full trick, either playing or honor-trick, is your quota for each rebid, after your partner has given a double raise of your major suit, if not vulnerable you are usually justified in a rebid for game on 4½ playing tricks plus. For example, assuming that you have dealt yourself this hand:

S-K-Q-9-6-4 H-A-J-9 D-4-2 C-K-10-5 and opened the bid at one spade which your partner has jumped to three spades. Your exact value is 4½ playing-tricks, ½ trick below a sound rebid, but since the gamble is for the much-prized game and your intermediate cards are very strong, a rebid could be chanced.

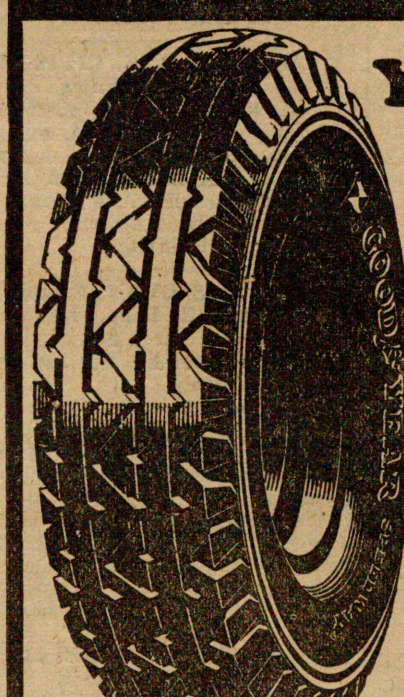

On really uncertain strength it is particularly hazardous to bid for a game contract, because here you enter the danger zone of a free double from the opposition. With a contract of less than game, even when quite unsound, you will usually escape a severe penalty, because the opponents fear to double you out. But the attempt to force a game bid on really deficient strength will frequently cost not only a double penalty, but the sacrifice of an advantageous partial score. It must be realized that there is not a game in every hand, and that partial scores at contract prove very valuable.

Surratt House History

During 1925 the famous old Surratt house, which was located on H street, was remodeled into a store and apartment house. It was in this house that the conspiracy to assassinate Lincoln was discussed by John Wilkes Booth and others. The structure had stood intact for nearly 60 years. It was here in the parlor, on the second floor, that some of the conspirators met and held conferences. John Wilkes Booth went to this house on the afternoon preceding the assassination. There he arranged for horses and guns to use in his flight. The house was the residence of Mrs. Mary Surratt. She conducted it in Civil war times as a boarding house for theatrical people, one of her patrons being John Wilkes Booth.—Washington Star.

MODERN RUSH NOT
OBSERVED IN SPAINPeasant's Tempo That of the Mule and Donkey.

The real Spain consists of all the land between the Pyrenees and Portugal, except Madrid, Barcelona, and perhaps one or two other towns. It is a land of vast plains, ending upon the horizon in great mountains dying down again far away into another vast plain. It is a land of the donkey and mule, of corn and vines and olives. The inhabitants are peasants who cultivate with immense assiduousness the great levels, and who terrace high up into the mountains in order to grow more corn and olives and oranges and almonds. . . . If he has money it goes into land rather than into the hands of bankers, brokers and jobbers, and so, although to the traveler from the railway-carriage window Spain appears to be a gigantic country very sparsely populated, the price of land is everywhere very high, amounting in some places to as much as £500 an acre.

The life of these peasants and cultivators is bound to the land. Its "tempo" is that of the pace of the mules and donkeys, which, wherever you may be, are to be seen with their great packs, moving slowly across the plains, or up and down the mountainous tracks. In Spain, as everywhere else, it is the method of transport which determines how men shall live. . . .

The superficial vivacity and excitability of the southerner conceals the fact that the Spaniard lives slowly and meditatively. In a Spanish posada you sit after dinner round a wood fire with the innkeeper and his family, the "boots" and the carrier, and the conversation is only an interval between long silences in which everyone meditatively stares into the glowing embers. The Spaniard, in fact, belongs to a Europe which had not invented the steam engine, or rather, perhaps, he belongs, not to Europe at all, but to the East, where men talk quickly, but live slowly, cultivating their gardens and moving at the same pace as their camels or their bullock carts.—Leonard Woolf in "Essays."

Boyhood friends can't explain why they are fond of each other. They are dumb, but devoted.

A vine-clad tree stump, a remnant of a once sturdy tree standing on the lawn of the Julius Hirsch place, fell over early Wednesday morning close to the sidewalk. The top of the stump was heavy and the base of the stump had decayed so it could not hold the weight of the remainder of the water soaked stump. The tree was struck by lightning about 20 years ago and died. Later it was trimmed down to its present size.

"What Will the Weather Be?"
Is Important to Many People

Officials of the U. S. Weather Bureau use the telephone in collecting data about the weather as well as in giving out weather information. In the large picture, W. P. Long, assistant observer, is about to send up a balloon and report its movements, from the weather station at Hoover Airport, Washington, D. C. In the smaller picture, W. C. Gaines, associate meteorologist, is prepared to receive readings of wind variation and plot them on a map.

Film Stars Demonstrate Route
Of Record "Short Distance" Call

The longest transoceanic telephone call ever made, 21,000 miles, from Los Angeles, Cal., to Sydney, Australia, now has its counterpart, the world's shortest call, 30 inches long, recently made at Paramount Studios, Hollywood. The map illustrates the route of the longest call, and Peggy Shannon and Buddy Rogers, film stars, are at opposite ends of the shortest route, which runs through walls of a soundproof cabinet used to check on sound quality in "talkies." When a talking picture is filmed, sound experts inside this box talk by telephone with persons outside it, to avoid delay in unlocking the tightly closed door. An electric light is used as a signal, instead of the usual telephone bell.

The United States was out of debt only once in its history, according to an answered question in Liberty. That was in 1835 during Andrew Jackson's administration.

Leaves come tumbling down, Round my head, Some of them are brown, Some are red, Reproduced by permission of the copyright owners.

I WAS very skeptical when some one told me that Phil Baxter, composer of "Piccolo Pete" had authored a ballad of great promise. Two more widely divergent songs can scarcely be imagined. But the reputation of this talented Kansas City handsman, achieved with "Piccolo Pete" proved to be enhanced by this second effort, for "Faded Summer Love" is certainly a beautiful song, and one that is rapidly capturing nationwide popularity. It has an unusual idea, well developed lyrically, and a lovely, flowing melody. Soon after I heard it, I was one of the first to use it on the air. Since I first sang it on my Cremona programs, I have had hundreds of requests to repeat it. This is especially remarkable, inasmuch as listeners don't usually enthuse over a song until they have heard it several times. "Faded Summer Love" has only been in circulation a few weeks, and already it's passing other favorites with a rapidity that's a bit amazing, even in these days of over-night hits. In singing or playing this number I take the tempo fairly slow, but anyone performing it has to be careful not to "drag" the tempo, for it has a melody that loses some of its effectiveness if the swinging quality of its rhythm is lost. Sometimes, when I start to select my "Song of the Week," I have a hard time deciding, but this week it's easy—"Faded Summer Love."

OHIO IS 'CENTER OF POPULATION' FOR TELEPHONES

Theoretical Median Point Has Moved Nearly 100 Miles Eastward in Decade

Calculations recently completed by the Chief Statistician's Division of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company indicate that the median point of telephone development in the United States, sometimes referred to as the numerical center of telephones, was located at the beginning of 1930 in Van Wert County, Ohio, at a distance of about 24 miles almost due west of the city of Lima, Ohio, and approximately 95 miles east of Logansport, Indiana.

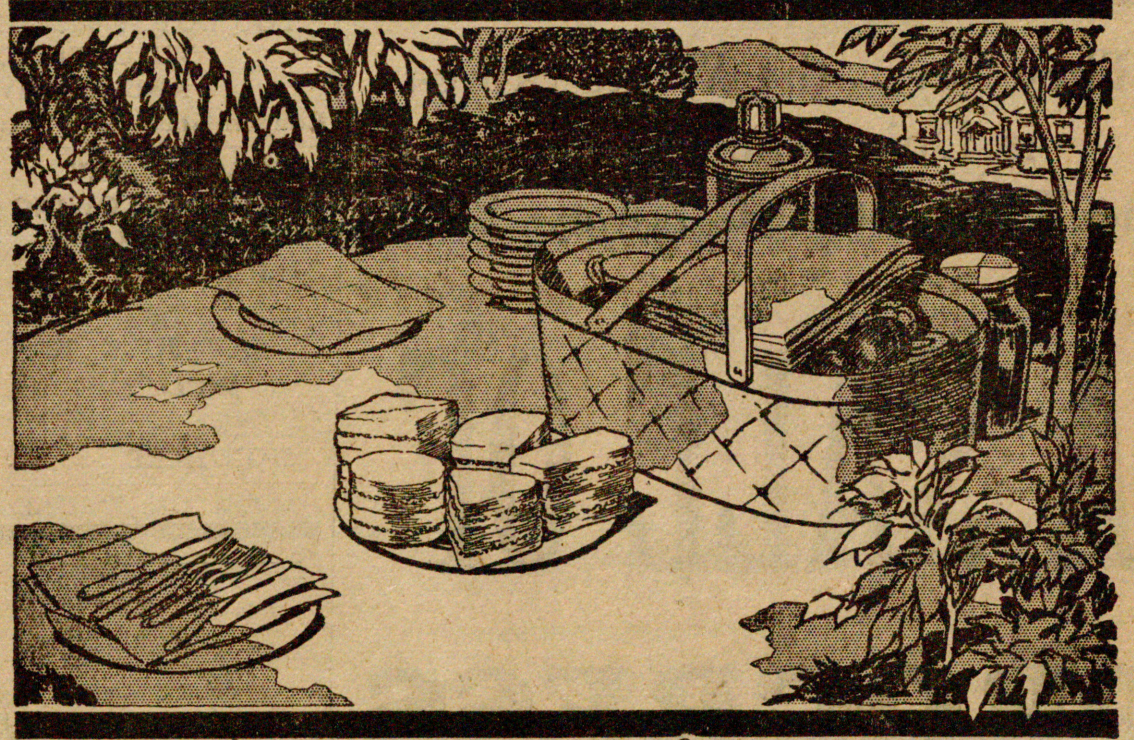

This "median point" is the junction of the line dividing the number of telephones equally north and south with the line dividing them equally east and west and was determined as the intersection of the 40° 44' north parallel of latitude and the 84° 34' west meridian of longitude.

The median point of population was located in 1920 about six miles southwest of Union City, Ind., whereas the corresponding telephone point was situated at that time about 90 miles air line distance northwest of that city, near Logansport, Ind. From 1920 to 1924 the median point of telephones moved about one mile in a northerly direction and approximately 39 miles in an easterly direction. During the five years from 1924 to 1929 this point moved about one mile in a southerly direction and approximately 56 miles farther to the east.

Information is not yet available from the 1930 census in regard to the movement of the median point of population during the decade from 1920 to 1930.

FRUIT SANDWICHES FOR SUMMER

WHEN you want to go for a drive and park and picnic—when you want to just plain picnic in nearby woods—when you want to eat out on the lawn or on the porch—when, in fact, you want to eat outdoors, it is both wise and convenient to make a selection of sandwiches part of your meal.

It's so easy, too, nowadays when we have ready-prepared sandwich spreads and all sorts of delicious cold meats and fish in cans ready to be put between buttered slices of white, brown or whole wheat bread. But there is one kind of sandwich, in particular, that it is wise to include in your menu, and that's a sandwich including some fruit.

So here are a few suggestions for fruit sandwiches for the summer months when outdoor eating is so popular.

From the Tropics

The following two sandwiches include fruits from the tropics—coconuts, bananas and pineapple.

Tropical Sandwich: Spread thinly sliced and buttered white bread with peanut butter. On one slice spread drained crushed Hawaiian pineapple and on the other sprinkle moist canned coconut. Put the two slices together, and cut in small sandwiches.

Fruit Sandwiches: Crush two bananas slightly, and add one-fourth cup drained crushed pineapple and one-fourth cup chopped nuts. Use as filling between white or whole wheat bread. This makes eight full slice sandwiches, but it's more fun to cut them into fancy shapes. Be sure to save the syrup drained from the canned pineapple to use as an ingredient of almost any cold fruit drink.

Containing Cheese

Cheese is both nutritious and sustaining in sandwiches. Here are three which contain it.

Pineapple Jam Sandwich: Mash one package cream cheese, and add two tablespoons drained crushed Hawaiian pineapple and one tablespoon blackberry or black currant jam. Spread between thin buttered slices of Boston brown bread. This makes from four to six whole slice sandwiches which can be cut up as desired.

Nippy Sandwich: Spread white bread with butter, and then with a very soft snappy yellow cheese. Cover one slice with drained pineapple, and put the two slices together.

Cream Cheese, Pineapple and Nut Sandwiches: Mix one package cream cheese, two tablespoons chopped nuts, two tablespoons drained crushed Hawaiian pineapple and a few grains of salt. Spread on thinly sliced, buttered white or whole wheat bread. This makes four full slice sandwiches. Cut into smaller sizes.

Nuts and Things

Nuts combine well with a number of other things beside cheese. Here are a couple of happy combinations:

Fruit and Nut Sandwiches: Mix one-half cup thick sour cream, one-half cup chopped nuts, and one-fourth cup drained crushed pineapple. Spread between thin slices of buttered raisin bread. This makes eight full slice sandwiches.

Two-Layer Pineapple Sandwiches: Shred the contents of one 6-ounce can of lobster, and add one-half cup chopped stuffed olives, one-half cup mayonnaise and one teaspoon lemon juice. Cream one package cream cheese, and add one-half cup chopped nuts and one-half cup drained crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Have three slices of bread for each sandwich. Spread a slice of bread with butter, cover with lobster mixture and a piece of lettuce. Lay on another slice of buttered bread, and spread with cheese and pineapple mixture. Top with last slice of bread, buttered. Cut as desired. This makes twelve full slice sandwiches.

Meat Sandwiches

Chicken Salad and Pineapple Sandwiches: Mince the contents of a 6-ounce can of chicken, and combine with one-eighth cup chopped celery, one-fourth cup chopped pimiento and mayonnaise to moisten. Split the slices from a No. 2 or a No. 2½ can of Hawaiian pineapple in two thin rounds. Cut bread in same size rounds as the pineapple. Lay a round of pineapple on buttered bread, spread with chicken salad, lay on a leaf of lettuce, cover with another round of pineapple, and top with bread. This makes eight whole sandwiches.

Ham and Pineapple Sandwiches: Mix together one-half cup minced ham, one-fourth cup mayonnaise, two tablespoons thick sour cream, two tablespoons grated horseradish and a few grains of salt. Add one-fourth cup crushed Hawaiian pineapple, well drained, and spread between buttered bread or between split and buttered finger rolls. This makes four whole slice sandwiches.

Don't forget to save the syrup drained from the canned pineapple in these recipes to use as an ingredient for a fruit drink.

Public Service Co., Cuts Dividends

With a view of safeguarding the company during the difficult situation through which the country is passing, directors of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois have decided to reduce the dividend on the common stock this quarter from $2 to 75 cents a share. The regular quarterly dividends on the company's preferred stock will be paid.

James Simpson, Chairman of the company, in making the announcement stated that a readjustment of salaries and wages of officers and employees was being worked out, the heaviest reductions being at the top. Similar action, both as to dividends and pay, have been taken by the Commonwealth Edison Company and the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, the electric utilities which serve Chicago.

"These reductions in dividends and expense are being made to allow all three companies to safeguard their current position, even though their earnings for the year ended March 31st were satisfactory," a statement issued by Mr. Simpson says.

"In accepting my present responsibilities in these companies," Mr. Simpson continued, "the public service nature of the call, in the broadest sense, was a prime consideration with me. I had in mind a three-fold obligation:

- (a) To the customers served;
- (b) To the employees of the companies.

- (c) To the owners of their securities—both bonds and stocks.

"In behalf of all interests the first responsibility of directors is to maintain the financial stability of each of these companies as a going concern, so that it may keep its service unimpaired, keep a competent, efficient operating organization intact, and maintain the low schedule of rates for service which have been consistently applied in the last decade. The times require that operating expenses must be kept as low as good service will permit. Therefore widespread economies were put into effect before reductions in dividends or the pay of officers and employees were considered.

"Investors in the properties have enjoyed consistent returns for many years.

"Employees have had good pay and good working conditions.

"The customers of these companies have had repeated rate reductions in the last decade. While prices of nearly everything else were going up or staying up, the quality of the service supplied was being steadily improved and rates for the services were steadily reduced.

"To preserve, under present economic conditions, the ability of these companies to continue to protect customers, investors and employees alike, it is essential to maintain and safeguard their cash resources. The above program is directed toward accomplishing this end.

"In the short time I have been associated with these three great companies, I have been greatly impressed by the efficiency of their operating organizations and the loyalty of their employees and officers to the institutions with which they are connected. With practically all officers and employees, their future is entirely tied up with their respective companies. The efficiency of these organizations is the best assurance of their continued progress and the safeguarding of their properties and business."

SYNOPSIS

Ragged and starving, a boy of about sixteen is befriended by a cunning party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. The boy, Shad (Sheridan), is sent to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their daughter, Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. He goes to work in the village of Amity Dam, and meets a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown. Bumpy, considered a drunkard because of his periodic lapses from strict sobriety, Bat Morryson comes, determined to take his son back to his own dissolute life. He is overruled by Colonel Blake, the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. A girl, young and pretty, comes to Bumpy's shack, inquiring for him. Shad applies himself diligently to his neglected education. Love for Ruth Blake takes a strong hold on his heart. In an attack made on the Perry family, Oscar Perry, the father, and his daughter, Mrs. Doolittle, wife of Cyrus Doolittle, prominent citizen, are shot and seriously wounded. Circumstantial evidence points to Bumpy Brown as the assassin. He is arrested.

"When Cyrus Doolittle came to my shop about five o'clock on November tenth, I was chatting with a man who had been telling about the scandalous talk of the old tinker. After Mr. Doolittle lay down I looked the shop and went upstairs to my room and got me a bite to eat. Then I lit a lamp and lay down on a bed and read some story papers. I didn't have a telephone. So when Mr. Doolittle woke up and asked me to let him out of the shop about half past eight I didn't know of the shooting. I told him then that he'd better look out for the tinker or he'd be done up. I was at Doolittle's the day that Cyrus put him off his place. The old man acted dreadful vicious."

The doctors and other witnesses were sworn. Motive was proved to the satisfaction of the judge. The tinker stood by the statements he had made on the night of the murder. Shad and the sheriff testified as to the finding of the cartridges and the revolver. The district attorney presented his theory. It was conclusive. The only dissenters in the courtroom were the boys, Bony and Shad. Old Bumpy Brown was held for the grand jury, which promptly indicted him for murder in the first degree.

The prisoner limped out of court with the sheriff and his deputy. The district attorney stood receiving the congratulations of friends when Shad and Bony approached. Colonel Blake greeted them.

"I know it looks bad, but I don't think he's guilty," said Shad. "What are your reasons?"

"He is not mean enough," was Shad's answer.

"It's the same old reason that has been pleaded since Cain killed Abel," the colonel laughed. "I don't complain because a boy's heart is better than his head. It ought to be. Come over to the house and spend the night with us."

"I'd like to, but I must get back tonight. Could we go and see Bumpy a few minutes?"

"Certainly, I'll go with you." Bumpy was glad to see them. He smiled, reaching through the bars and shaking their hands cheerfully as he had been wont to do in Brown's cove.

"We wanted you to know that you've got at least two friends," said Shad. "Friends! I used to have more friends than you could shake a stick at. They're all gone but you and the woman. I miss her dreadful."

"I guess you ain't scared,"—this from Bony.

"Scared! By Jeedix!" Bumpy exclaimed. "A man who has shook hands with death as often as I have ain't apt to be nervous."

"Assuming that you are innocent, have you any theory about the crime?" Colonel Blake asked.

"Well, sir, I have an idea, but I may be wrong. I can be pretty mean, but I ain't a-goin' to say that a man done murder 'less I know what I'm talkin' about. It ain't manners."

Bumpy reached through the bars and shook their hands.

"We're going to find the guilty man," said Shad.

"Boys, I like you—by Jeedix, I do!" Bumpy exclaimed. "But you stick to your jobs. I'm nigh the end o' the road anyhow."

That ended the interview. It was supper time. Colonel Blake went with the boys to the railroad station.

The boys rode to Ashfield, got their suppers at a restaurant and walked home. They were talking of the events of the day.

Bony said: "It looks awful bad for Bumpy. Do ye suppose he could have gone an' done it in a kind of crazy fit?"

"No, I don't. He is not that kind of a man."

"Seems as if he didn't care much whether they hang him or not," Bony added.

"Maybe he'll fool 'em yet. That ol' man is smart."

Shad spent the night with Bony. The people were almost unanimous in the conviction that Bumpy Brown was guilty of the murder, even those who had little knowledge of the damning evidence. In spite of their familiarity with every detail of it, the boys stood firmly for their friend.

Their voices were the only ones that had a word to say in favor of the suspected man. They were openly criticized for being the friends of a murderer.

It was nearing nine o'clock of a chilly November night. The usual band of murder gossips had left the store of Ephraim Smithers. He and his young clerk were getting ready to close. Suddenly Bony Squares entered. He had been running and was breathing hard. Shad was in the front end of the store stacking some tools. Bony was excited. He whispered to his young friend.

"By Jeedix!" he exclaimed, quoting the favorite oath of old Bumpy Brown. "I've run a mile. 'Fraid I'd be too late. I've learnt a lot o' things, an' I've got to have a talk with you. Ask ol' fur-face if you can come and stay all night with me."

Always Bony had been wont to speak of the bearded Smithers as "old fur-face."

Shad knew that the request was full of danger, but he felt that he must hear what Bony had to say, even if it involved his dismissal.

He asked for permission to spend the night with his friend. Mr. Smithers turned upon him with a vexed look. He never got angry.

"Do you want to lose your job?" he queried, in a tender tone.

"No, sir," Shad answered. "I am not so happy here as I was. But I—"

"A Man Who Has Shook Hands With Death as Often as I Have Ain't Apt to Be Nervous."

I'd hate to lose the job and your—your friendship, sir. You and Mrs. Smithers have been good to me."

"I guess we'd better settle up tomorrow," said the man. "There's a lot of talk about you an' Bony, but I haven't anything against you. I wish you well."

Shad went with Bony to his little garret room.

"I'm glad you've quit rasslin' with spittoons an' molasses jugs and kerosene cans," said Bony. "I've got six dollars saved up. How much have you got?"

"Twenty-two dollars!" Shad answered proudly.

"We'll just hang on to it an' make it go as far as we can. We've got a job to do for ol' Bumpy Brown. Some one is tryin' to saddle this murder on him, an' he ain't no more guilty than you an' I be—not a bit! I've been down to Ashfield an' I've got some news. First read that."

He took from his pocket a poster which he had torn from a telegraph pole in Ashfield. It said:

"REWARD!
"I will pay $1,000 for the conviction of the criminal who wounded my wife and killed her father."
"CYRUS DOOLITTLE."

"Maybe we can make a lot o' money," Bony went on. "If we do, we'll go snucks. I'll tell ye why it ain't Bumpy Brown. You remember that man you see down the road that got over the fence an' went behind Doty's barn. That must 'a' been about five minutes after seven. You thought, but couldn't be sure, that he wore a broad-brimmed hat. Forty minutes later Jack Labarge met a man two miles down the road in the dark. He had a broad-brimmed hat on. He was walkin' like Sam Hill towards Ashfield. He limped like Bumpy Brown. It was so dark Jack couldn't see his face. Away down just above the road that goes into the village Henry Lockwood comin' home in a hay wagon met a man wearin' a broad-brimmed hat. He was walkin' fast. He had his hat tilted sideways so Henry couldn't see his face. The moon was out then. This man didn't limp. There's a funny thing about it. He didn't limp. Henry is sure o' that. It was within half a mile of Ashfield an' 'most two mile below Bumpy's on the other side o' the river. Henry says it was a little after eight o'clock."

"They say that the Bensons' hired girl passed the same man almost in the edge o' the village a little later, but I didn't have time to look her up today. Do ye see how it all jibes—the time an' the broad-brimmed hat an' the fast walkin'?" Who was this man with the broad-brimmed hat who left here right after the murder an' dodged you because you had a lantern an' went off the road? Why did he hide his head behind his hat brim when Henry Lockwood passed him? I say that was the murderer."

Shad was thrilled by the news that Bony gave.

In a moment they heard some one coming up the stairs. Then a rap at the door. Bony opened it. Doctor Gorse—a tall, thin, smooth-shaved, gray-haired, kindly man, stood before them.

These two boys had interested the doctor. Because they needed friendship and good counsel the doctor had sought them out. He had been like a wise father to Shad. He had told his friends that these boys had good stuff in them.

He came now and put his hand on Shad's head and gave it a friendly shake. "My young friend, I heard you were here," he said. "I came over to tell you not to worry. You'll come out all right."

He had called to see Mrs. Smithers, ill with sick headache and had learned of Shad's dismissal.

"We're going to see if we can get Bumpy Brown out of his trouble," said Shad. "Some one is trying to put this murder on him."

Bony repeated to the doctor his suspicion of the man with the broad-brimmed hat and the circumstances on which it was founded.

"I'm inclined to think you are right," the doctor began. "It is a curious case. I think that the officials have been misled by strong probabilities. Now in the case of an amateur, crude, bungling criminal, probabilities may lead to the truth. But when you are dealing with an able offender it is an axiom of the best procedure that you must distrust whatever is probable. It will lead you astray. I think that I know the case of the district attorney. It would seem to be strong enough to hang Bumpy Brown unless—"

The doctor paused. They waited but he sat looking downward gravely and said no more.

"What are we to do?" Shad asked.

"I'll tell you what I would do. I would follow that broad-brimmed hat down the road tomorrow morning. If it was worn by the criminal, he probably hid the colored handkerchief and perhaps the hat somewhere on or near the road. Look in every hole and under every culvert. Examine the fence corners and the crevices in the stone walls. Go and find that hired girl at the Bensons'. What kind of a man was it who passed her in the road that night? Did he limp? How was he dressed? Did he wear a broad-brimmed hat?"

"Supposing we found the handkerchief?" Shad asked.

"Take it to the district attorney with all the information you have been able to gather. You know Colonel Blake. I have heard that he has the revolver and the bullets discharged in committing the crime. If this is true, tell him that you would like to know where the revolver came from. No doubt it came from some store in this part of the country. Who bought it and when?"

Food Value of Tapioca Discovered in Odd Way

"Tapioca," which is of native Brazilian origin, is the name applied to a vegetable food obtained from the starch in the roots of the plant known as bitter cassava, which is indigenous to tropical America. According to a Latin-American tradition, the food value of the cassava root was accidentally discovered by a Spanish explorer lost in the jungles of Brazil. He had heard from the Indians that the sap of the cassava plant was highly poisonous, and, preferring a quick death by poison to a slow one by starvation, he ate a bowl of soup prepared by boiling cassava roots in water. Instead of dying he lived to tell the world how this pleasant and digestible food saved him from starvation.

As a matter of fact the milky juice of the bitter cassava is highly poisonous and therefore cannot be eaten in its natural condition without danger, but the application of heat, as the explorer discovered, destroys the poisonous property.

Big Mouth Has No Value
Although the mouth of the baleen whale, the largest creature in the world, is so large that a man could stand upright in it, its throat is scarcely large enough to admit a man's fist and the tube by means of which its food reaches its stomach is about the size of a walking stick. Since this huge animal is toothless, it can therefore eat only very tiny creatures.

Save by Growing Legumes at Home

Production Costs Lowered Without Bad Effects on Rations.

(By C. L. BLACKMAN, Dairying Extension Specialist, Ohio State University.)

Low prices paid for milk and cream at the farm make it more than ever necessary to reduce production costs. One sure way to cut costs is to grow more legume hays. Legume hays are far more valuable than corn stover, straw or non-legume hays because they are more palatable and are relatively richer in protein and lime.

When low protein roughages are fed it is necessary to balance the ration by the purchase of large amounts of high protein factory by-products such as cottonseed meal, oil meal, etc., which usually are high in price. The usual recommendation is to feed a grain ration carrying 17 to 18 per cent of digestible protein with timothy. With legume hay, 12 to 14 per cent of protein in the grain ration is sufficient. A 17 per cent grain ration contains about 33½ per cent of high protein feed. A 12 to 14 per cent ration which is adopted to legume hay only need contain from 15 to 20 per cent of high protein concentrates. So a direct saving in cash outlay is made by growing legumes at home.

Molasses as Factor in Food Ration of Steers

Molasses was tested out as a supplemental feed for steers at the Ohio experiment station last year. Five different lots of steers were used and each lot received a basic ration of 2 pounds of protein supplement, 6½ pounds of corn silage, and 1½ pounds of mixed hay each day. In addition lot one received all the shelled corn they would consume and lot two had 2 pounds of shelled corn daily and enough cane molasses to give them the same amount of feed by weight that lot one consumed.

Lot three received 2 pounds of cane molasses and all the shelled corn they would eat and lot four was self-fed molasses in addition to a full feed of corn. The fifth lot received 2 pounds of beet molasses per steer in addition to all the corn they would eat. In general the molasses-fed steers made substantially greater growth than the others, lot four showing the greater daily increase.

While it was very definitely proven that molasses feeding is not a profitable practice at last year's prices, yet there were indications that the molasses contained a growth factor which would be important in a long-time feeding period.—Successful Farming.

Succulent Cover Crops Best
There are two ways in which the time of plowing under a green crop may materially affect the growth of the crop which follows. In the first place, such cover crops as rye which live over the winter may remove too much moisture in the spring if they are allowed to grow too late, and therefore leave too little moisture for the growth of the main crop.

The second way the growth may be affected is that when a succulent crop is plowed under it decays quickly and furnishes plant food for the new crop but if the cover crop is allowed to get woody it decays slowly and may actually reduce the available nitrogen in the soil temporarily.—American Agriculturist.

"Rust Buster" Clubs
Black stem rust of wheat, oats, rye and barley is harbored by barberry bushes as one of its hosts, so that destruction of this intermediate host is essential in grain-growing countries. In 15 Iowa and Minnesota counties, boys and girls "rust buster" clubs have been formed for the purpose of locating seats of infection, and explaining the need for their removal. These boys and girls last year located 200 properties containing these barberries. The barberries are spread widely in that country by seeds dropped by birds that have eaten the berries.—Rural New-Yorker.

Study Shipping Fever
A systematic study of the causes of hemorrhage septicemia, commonly known as shipping fever, in live stock and methods of controlling this disease is under way in several states. Tests are being made by vaccinating stocker and feeder cattle before shipment to market, some ten to thirty days, and other one or two days before shipping; by vaccination in the stock yards where the cattle are marketed, and by vaccinating the young calves on the home premises. Appropriate numbers of untreated control animals are provided in each instance.—Ohio Farmer.

Fertilizer Values
While increase in yield is usually the principal effect of fertilizers, other effects, such as improvement in quality, earlier start, earlier maturity, and greater disease resistance are frequently of equal value, says a writer in the Wisconsin Agriculturist. Harder, more mature corn, earlier and plumper small grains, better grading potatoes, heavier heads of cabbage, better tobacco—these are common, rather than unusual effects of good fertilizer treatment.

POULTRY

PROVED WORTH OF LIGHT FOR CHICKS

Illumination That Brought Results.

Within the past two years, several experiment stations have reported that more rapid growth and lower death loss may be had with chicks kept in brooder houses where a dim light is used throughout the night.

Personally, we are sold on this method, though our use of all-night lights was followed in our first experience (two years ago) through necessity and not because of choice. We bought some started chicks, two weeks of age, that had been kept in a lighted room during their two weeks' living at the hatchery.

As dark approached at the end of their first day in our poultry house, they became panicky. They ran about cheeping or piled up in the corner. We brought in an ordinary farm lantern and hung it from the ceiling. The chicks then bedded down very quietly and quickly. Later we ran electric wires to the brooder house and used a 10-watt light. We used lights until the chicks were six or eight weeks old.

Without question, this lot of chicks grew faster than any lot we had raised previously. Our experience tallies with that of many others with whom I have talked. Even if the chicks become frightened, they do not pile up. We found that they ate considerable feed during that night, even though the light was dim and so arranged that its rays did not fall directly on the chicks when sleeping.—J. W. Wallace's Farmer.

Show Results in Fight

on Avian Tuberculosis

A summary of progress in eradicating tuberculosis from poultry is now being issued monthly by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. The summary includes the results of inspection of poultry flocks in the eleven states doing systematic work in detecting and eradicating tuberculosis of poultry. These states are Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio, South Dakota, and Wisconsin. In addition there are reports for ten other states in which veterinarians engaged in testing cattle for the disease also inspected poultry. The report includes the tabulated results of post-mortem examinations of flocks and fowls affected with tuberculosis, as shown by clinical examination or the tuberculin test. The summary for February shows 8,065 flocks under supervision for the eradication of avian tuberculosis.

Helps Feathers to Grow
According to certain English observers, it is reported, when there is any difficulty in getting feathers to grow linseed and sulphur help the growth considerably. At the same time, do not overlook the fact that a good supply of flint grit is also a big factor, and if those who rear chicks would only see that the young have plenty of small grit there would not be the common complaint about the feathers not growing well; it will also keep a lot of other troubles away. There is a lot of silica in a feather, and the best way to help the growth of the feathers is to supply flint grit.

Poultry Notes
Overheating as well as chilling must be avoided in raising baby chicks.

A pullet usually gains in weight until the end of her first winter.

A chick starting mash should not contain more than 18 per cent protein.

Unless your chicks have some time in the sunshine each day, they should have cod liver oil in their feed.

Farmers in the United States raise more than twice as many chickens as any other country in the world.

The standard weight for an adult Bronze turkey is 36 pounds. It is the heavyweight of the poultry yard.

Low roosts when the chicks are about three weeks old will help to keep them from crowding.

Never let chicks go thirsty. That is the way of extinction. A 10-inch diameter drinking fountain is the most easily handled type.

The Pekin duck originated in China, and was introduced into this country about 1873. It soon became the most popular breed on commercial duck farms.

In a cold house hens must use a greater portion of the food for keeping warm and can have less left for egg production.

Eggs have been very low in price, but quality eggs continue to demand a substantial premium—in the larger towns and cities, at least.

Start the chicks eating at twenty-four hours of age—the forty-eight-hour theory and practice has passed into history as a rearing fallacy.

Just Hamlet
It seems that Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., whose sense of humor is admirably developed, burst in on a conference of story writers and plot contrivers at the First National studios with the demand that they listen to a plot he had just thought up. He outlined it in detail, without dates, however, and one and all, the assembled craftsmen dismissed it, saying that it was too episodic and, in short, no good. Douglas departed with a grin, but turned as he went out the door to say: "Well, some one thought it was good. The story I've just told you, gentlemen, is the plot of 'Hamlet.'"—Boston Herald.

Joke on the Joker
Curious humor was exhibited by a young Egyptian at Cairo, who announced "for a joke" that his father, who was away from home, had died. The youth watched the extensive preparations for the funeral with great amusement. But when the father returned home in the best of health and severely unbraided the young man for his trick, the son was so mortified that he threw himself into the Nile. And the preparations for the father's "funeral" were used for the real funeral of the son.

The biggest dollar bill ever made in this country, 12 feet long and 5½ feet wide, is being finished at the bureau of engraving and printing in Washington, D. C. It is made mostly of macerated pulp from old money and is estimated to include about $10,000,000 worth of this old destroyed currency. The bill will be used for exhibition purposes.

"You must try to see both sides in every question."
"I do," answered Senator Sargh. "But the effort to do so will make it hard to go straight ahead if you persist until it renders you cross-eyed."—Washington Star.

OVER HALF OF ALL TELEPHONES ARE IN THE U. S.

This Country Also Leads with 16 Telephones to Each 100 of Population

The World's Telephones
North America	21,695,376
Europe	10,035,530
Asia	1,201,008
Oceania	771,436
South America	537,121
Africa	236,108
Total	34,526,629

Out of a total of 34,526,629 telephones in the world, about 63 per cent are located in North America. Of these, 93 per cent are to be found in the United States, 4 per cent in Canada, and 2 per cent in Mexico. These figures are as of January 1, 1930, the last date for which comparable figures are available because of the time required to obtain correct data from foreign countries.

Germany Leads in Europe
Europe has 29 per cent of the world's telephones. Germany leads with 9 per cent, followed by Great Britain and Northern Ireland, France, Sweden, and Italy respectively. In total number of telephones, these countries also occupy the same relative position. From the viewpoint of telephones per capita, Denmark makes the best showing in Europe, followed by Sweden, Norway and Switzerland.

Telephones on Other Continents
In Asia, Japan has the greatest number of telephones, with a total of 865,516, and in Africa the Union of South Africa leads with 108,937. In South America the Argentine Republic is the best developed from a telephone standpoint. In Oceania, Australia of course has a commanding lead with 505,554 telephones, and New Zealand is in second place with 161,041.

World-Wide Growth in Telephones
For the last year for which comparative figures are available, every country in the world showed a telephone gain, with the exception of Peru, Ecuador, and Bolivia in South America, and Porto Rico in the West Indies. The greatest gain was shown by the United States. Next came Germany, and then Great Britain and Northern Ireland. The only countries which can show a telephone development of ten telephones or more to each 100 of population are the United States, with a ratio of 16, Canada with 14, and New Zealand with 10 telephones to each 100 people.

Tinley Triangle Talks

Hi there everybody! Hope you'll had a good time over the Fourth. The dance which was sponsored by the "band" went over with a bang. And by the way saw quite a few club members there—thanks for goin'.

"Bruggy" and Meyer are back in the ole' town again and by their appearance they look as if about all they did was take sunbaths, swim and go bathing. Well, we don't blame you, cuz that's what vacation is for. When the crowd all went to Cedar Lake last Thursday night we missed Wally's girl friend. Doesn't Nellie swim or have you given her the air, Wally?

Oh yes, it appears that a certain young man is very much interested in a sort of Janet Gaynor out south. We guess the nurses don't rate so "hot" with him anymore. How about it, are we right? Haven't seen our bakery gal with "Jimmie" here lately. What's wrong? "Bernie" and Bernetta looked mighty happy Monday night—Why? —Cuz both Les and Bob were there. We guess that's reason enough. Don't forget business meeting on Monday, July 18th at 8 p. m. sharp. Be seen' yuh again next week.
